

Jane Liu
QWOS

Candidates Objectives

QWOS has previously co-hosted events with AustCham and has recently become an AustCham member. As QWOS will have an increased focus on Australian immigration in 2019, I believe I will have much offer AustCham and the broader Australia-China business community in South China next year.

My vision for my role as an AustCham Board Director is as follows:

- Contributing ideas for business- and immigration-related events for 2019
- Contributing my expertise in immigration, and co-organising immigration-related seminars as I felt there was a lack of these in 2018
- Promoting AustCham throughout my business and social network in South China with the aim of:
  - Attracting more individuals and companies to become an AustCham member
  - Increasing attendance at AustCham's events
  - Attracting more companies to sponsor AustCham's events
- Making introductions to the AustCham General Manager which will be useful in promoting AustCham as a brand and Australia-China business relations in South China
- Assisting the AustCham Secretariat with events, marketing, business development etc. when required
- Attending monthly board meetings
- Other tasks as assigned

Candidates Biography

Jane Liu is a senior consultant at QWOS, one of the top three immigration and investment firms in China that focuses on helping high-net-worth individuals immigrate to and invest in overseas countries, including Australia. As part of her role, Jane provides professional advice to clients throughout the immigration and investment process, including advising on such matters as overseas countries' immigration, property and investment regulations, social welfare and tax policies, and education systems. Jane has a wealth of knowledge and experience in relation to immigration and investment in overseas countries, having worked in the industry for more than six years.

Jane's connection with Australia began more than eight years ago when she worked as a bilingual guide for the Australian Pavilion at the 2010 Shanghai World Expo. In this role, she introduced Australian history, culture and modern life in Mandarin Chinese and English to a daily crowd of 50,000 visitors (95% Chinese), and interpreted for Australian Government representatives when receiving Chinese VIP guests and delegations. Since then, she has continued her connection with Australia through her regular participation in AustCham South China's events and activities. Jane believes that AustCham is a great organisation for building a better bridge between Australia and China, and advancing the broader Australia-China trade and investment relationship.
